Grantee: Marin County

Amount Awarded: $250,000.00

Grantee Contact: Alexander Soulard

Grantee Contact Phone Number: 415-499-4298

CalRecycle Grant manager: Linda Dickinson

Project Summary: Currently, aside from a few satellite locations, residents of Marin County must drop off their used batteries and fluorescent lamps at one of two permanent locations for drop-off of household hazardous materials. The proposed project will establish drop-off locations in partnership with local businesses for fluorescent lamps and household batteries. Besides the two permanent HHW facilities located in Novato and San Rafael there are few locations in Marin that officially accept universal waste such as household batteries and fluorescent lamps, which discourage the community from proper disposal. This program, added to Marin County's existing programs, will create the ideal household hazardous waste (HHW) collection program necessary to achieve high levels of HHW diversion.

CalRecycle Grant manager: Linda Dickinson

Project Summary: The County of San Joaquin proposes to partner with the City & County of San Francisco and the County of Tehama, along with the California Product Stewardship Institute, Visions Paint Recycling, and the Green Purchasing Institute, in order to develop the California Paint Product Stewardship Program. This project has two primary goals: (1) launch educational campaigns on source reduction, paint reuse, recycled paint procurement, and the practicality of an extended producer responsibility (EPR) system for paint; and (2) develop an EPR system to manage leftover paint that is economical, flexible, and replicable throughout the state of California, and relevant to other states throughout the country. This project aims to decrease the amount of leftover paint generated in California, increase paint reuse, and increase the collection of leftover paint through take-back partnership efforts. CalRecycle Grant manager: Linda Dickinson

Project Summary: With a population of 1 million residents, and an area covering 178 square miles, the City of San Jose is the largest city in California that currently does not have a household hazardous waste (HHW) drop-off facility within its city limits. The City has lost its sole HHW drop-off site in late 2006 due to the planned development of the land parcel in which the facility was previously located. The City has acquired a new property and has been diligently planning to design and construct a new HHW facility in a central area of the City that is currently underserved and has had a historically lower participation level in the HHW program. The new San Jose HHW drop-off facility is anticipated to begin construction in Spring 2009, with a grand opening for public services in Summer 2009.
